

10 movie posters

: This is the official poster for the movie 'The green mile'. The poster does not give much information about the movie. At first glance we can see tom hanks in the role that looks to be a cop and there really isn't much else to note. The colours in this poster are dark giving the audience the impression that it is going to be gloomy like the colour pallet.

: I am unsure if the poster is fan made or a concept but it seems like a DVD cover that can also be used as a poster. In this poster we see tom hanks in a cop like role and what seems to be the prisoner (John Coffey) with what seems to be a distressed look on his face. We also see an electric chair which is the biggest give away to the audience for what the movie is about. We can see a cop, a prisoner and an electric chair. This tells the audience that the prisoner is on death row. The colours in this poster are also dark put there is a more prominent green colour that gives the movie more colour but is still a dark green sticking to the shades in the poster.

This is the official movie poster for Zack Snyder's 'batman vs superman'. At first glance we see Batman and superman in a mid-shot stood in front of there combined logos stood looking intensely at each other ready to fight. The colours in this poster are mostly dark and grey colours to contrast the tone of the movie which is a dark and serious one.

: This is also an official batman vs superman poster. This poster gives the audience a more detailed and grittier version of the combined logos of batman and superman. The poster sticks to the dark colours and shading to stick with the tone of the movie.