

Strengths

Receptive – Protagonists have strong opinions, but they're far from closed-minded. They recognize the importance of allowing others to express themselves fully. Even when Protagonists don't agree with someone, they recognize that person's right to voice their truth. –

I do agree with this because I am very open minded and I also show people, they have a voice and let people voice their own voice

Reliable – Few things bother Protagonists more than the prospect of letting down a person or cause that they believe in. People with this personality type can be counted on to see their promises and responsibilities through – even when it's difficult to do so. -

I do agree with this because I can be responsible in hard and difficult situation and I can be there when people asked me to be there because I am always can be counted with the promises.

Passionate – Protagonists are far from being boring do-gooders. These types brim with interests, and they take great pleasure in pursuing their hobbies – whether that's hiking, cooking, dancing, growing houseplants, or something else entirely. As a result, they rarely find themselves at a loss for something interesting to do. -

I am passionate my games and that why I going to an FMP about gaming and because I like their made and how they made their stories about them.

Altruistic – These personalities are known for harbouring a deep desire to be a force for positive change. Protagonists genuinely believe that if they bring people together, they can do a world of good. - I agree with this because how i can trust people easily and help other and believe there is good in people.

Charismatic – Determined and inspiring, Protagonists often find their way into leadership roles. Whether they're captain of their softball team or a leader on the world stage, they rarely lose sight of their main goal: to be of service to others. -

I agree with this because I am very determined to help people and finishing my work as well.

Weaknesses

Unrealistic – Many Protagonists put pressure on themselves to right every wrong that they encounter. But no matter how hard these personalities strive, it just isn't realistic for them to solve all of the world's problems. If they aren't careful, they can spread themselves too thin – and be left unable to help anyone.

I can agree with this because we can be very pushy and trying to make the world perfect but we can't solve every problem

Overly Idealistic – Protagonists tend to have clear ideas about what's right and what's wrong. They often think that everyone shares these fundamental principles – or, at least, that everyone should share these principles. So, it can come as a genuine shock to Protagonists when people violate their core values, such as truth or justice. -

I can agree with this because we can always over think the problem and try to solve it and try to make our ideas.

Condescending – People with this personality type enjoy teaching others, particularly about the causes and beliefs that matter so much to them. But, at times, Protagonists' attempts to “enlighten” others may come across as patronising – not the most effective strategy for persuading other people, unfortunately. -

I do not agree with this weakness because I'm not condescending

Intense – When it comes to self-improvement, Protagonists are rarely short on energy or determination. But they may not recognise that not everyone shares these qualities. At times, Protagonists may push others to make changes that they aren't ready for – or simply aren't interested in making in the first place. - I agree with this because it's really hard for me to keep focus and have the energy to do work I don't know how I try and make it better.

Overly Empathetic – Compassion is among this personality type's greatest strengths. But Protagonists have a tendency to take on other people's problems as their own – a habit that can leave them emotionally and physically exhausted. - I agree with this because I take other problems than mine own because i love to help people and I don't know how to change it.
