Genre Research

Genre- A movie category that a movie comes under.

Conventions- little parts of the genre allow us to distinguish between the genres through character similarities or repeated plots. Having elements that the audience expects as they have been used many times previously in films.

Action-

(masterclass.com)

Portraying the main character as heroic, in a fast-paced movie. Action movies have many scenes of fighting and chasing. Movies in this genre also feature superheroes so the good guy that will end up winning at the end or die to save someone or its country, martial arts that will result in making fighting scenes look more amusing, exciting stunts which are mostly performed by the superhero making the audience happy and excited. Moreover, dramatic music is mostly used in movies like this to set the mood and blend in.

Types-

As well as different movie genres there are also different types of movies that come under the genre action. For example, a genre type is military and war action. Basically, this is an action movie based on the war, a historical battle or something along the lines representing somewhat of the war through the fighting or how they portray themselves. Spy and espionage action movies, where this will include sometimes a little comedy or will include the main character spying on his daughter's kidnappers to find his daughter which will end up in a lot of fighting. Martial arts action movies which will result in been seen as learning how to fight, someone wanting revenge so goes to someone who will teach them how to fight and become strong example of this is a movie called enough. Then there is western shot 'em up kind of action movies where there will have movies made back in time where things here different every guy that had a cigar would look rich and have most attention and would also have a gun without lincense.

The audience expectation-

In my opinon, what I believe is that the audience whilst watching a action movie would expect a story to unfold which will follow the consistency of following the elements of a plot, a little comdey, characterization and action. Not just simple violent scenes but 2 second cuts involving lots of action with a fast and easy pace. The movie should have incidental music that will bring up tension or calm the audience. In mnay action movies there is always a different kind of surprise included that will shock or traumatize the audience.the audience look out for different shots with action sometimes a little sometimes a lot.

Similarities Between Action movies And other Genres

Action is associated with a specific type of scene or spectacle (explosions, chases, combat); adventure, on the other hand, refers to a storey (typically, but not always, the quest narrative) set in a fantasy or exoticized setting, such as the search for mythical objects or treasure in films like King Solomon's Mines.

(encyclopedia.com)

Action and adventure movies are more or less typically face-paced. However more scenes can include more action of fighting and violence involving direct conflicts. An example of this is fighting or one of the actors running away from danger which can result in death or something as worse. Whereas Thriller, refers to more of a psychological suspense and reasons to why the main character is running in common suspense.
