Comments:

Well done Ellis, you have completed this project to a satisfactory standard. The work submitted meets all the assessment criteria and is of a satisfactory standard. You have shown you are very capable as a live sound engineer in this project and you have some good aspects to your portfolio.

Context - You have provided a very brief introduction that clarifies your aims and purpose with some examples from the music industry. You show understanding of context throughout the performance you researched and promoted.

Research – This was sufficient but lacking a detailed and expansive exploration into the subject matter ensuring a broad range of resources have been implemented. You must look to implement research from a wider range of sources and reference carefully in order to reach a higher grade.

Problem Solving – You successfully demonstrated the ability to solve problems as and when required with effective and decisive means. Your job role required problem solving though out and enabled you to show your skills in this area. You should try to develop this within your evaluation to demonstrate further understanding and evaluation of your problem-solving skills, it is not about just solving problems but developing your methods and understanding of solving them.

Planning and Production – Your planning and production skills were somewhat limited to a brief description of what you hoped to achieve. You should include the resources you require to complete each task and revisit your production plan to check whether you are on track progressively throughout the project.

Practical Skills – Your skills as a live sound engineer and lighting engineer have really developed through this project. You demonstrated a professional approach to the performance at a level expected in a professional performance. This might be an area you wish to study further but you would need to start being more autonomous in this area.

Evaluation and Reflection – Evaluative and analysis is rather brief and descriptive. The audio evaluation works and this may be something to consider for future projects. Make sure you evaluate and reflect in response to each task rather than simply at the end.

Presentation - You have structured and presented your work effectively but you could think about the presentation in the wider context of the industry in future.

Well done Ellis, you worked well as a team member to create a very successful performance on both sound and lighting to a sold out audience! You need to make sure you are more thorough in your evaluations in future, as well as documenting research, planning and problem solving. Concentrate on the areas of the matrix you need to improve to achieve a good grade.
