In what ways did you decide on your theme/concept for the project?

I decided on my theme through a mix of research, preference over different types of dreams and how realistically I can use practical effects and editing to achieve my goal.

Explain your theme/concept for the project?

I will be exploring the childlike feeling of going into "your own world" by using the idea of portals to create the effect that this world can be entered by a child from their bedroom, as if when they go to sleep they are able to explore their own imagination in this form.

How have you generated/developed ideas? (Where did you get your ideas from?)

I used a mix of a mind map with ideas of different types of dreams to secondary research on the different types of dreams. This is then coupled with my chosen artist using a method of creating a portal using a light bar on a slow shutter speed.

Which artists have you researched and how have they influenced and inspired your ideas?

I have researched into a photographer called Kyle Nutt, an online influencer who does a wide range of product photography and videography and is able to create amazing pieces of work with a small budget. I take inspiration from Kyle Nutt's use of lighting and creativity.

What other research have you done (eg. primary, contextual) and how has this helped you decide on your approach or influenced your ideas?

I have done some experimentation with light photography using a phone flashlight and I am confident that I know how to form different shapes within the recommended amount of time from the settings.

Without being too specific, what thoughts are you having regarding a finished outcome for exhibition?

I believe that I am able to create a piece which will accurately depict the concept of "Dreams" according to my perspective ready for an exhibition.
